

Chestnut-scented would-be-Hermitage. 60% Marsanne, 40%Roussanne. An unfiltered dry white from young vines. New barrels and old, early- and late-harvested grapes, creating the finest Saint Joseph blanc, bar none, since Faury's 2004. The visuals in the glass start things off nicely. Then the bouquet. It smells complex and honeyed, with ample amounts of charm. A nice combination of lushness and dry nervosity. Dandelions and stone fruits.

Chestnut-scented would-be-Hermitage. 60% Marsanne, 40%Roussanne. An unfiltered dry white from young vines. New barrels and old, early- and late-harvested grapes, creating the finest Saint Joseph blanc, bar none, since Faury's 2004. The visuals in the glass start things off nicely. Then the bouquet. It smells complex and honeyed, with ample amounts of charm. A nice combination of lushness and dry nervosity. Dandelions and stone fruits.

Chestnut-scented would-be-Hermitage. 60% Marsanne, 40%Roussanne. An unfiltered dry white from young vines. New barrels and old, early- and late-harvested grapes, creating the finest Saint Joseph blanc, bar none, since Faury's 2004. The visuals in the glass start things off nicely. Then the bouquet. It smells complex and honeyed, with ample amounts of charm. A nice combination of lushness and dry nervosity. Dandelions and stone fruits.

Chestnut-scented would-be-Hermitage. 60% Marsanne, 40%Roussanne. An unfiltered dry white from young vines. New barrels and old, early- and late-harvested grapes, creating the finest Saint Joseph blanc, bar none, since Faury's 2004. The visuals in the glass start things off nicely. Then the bouquet. It smells complex and honeyed, with ample amounts of charm. A nice combination of lushness and dry nervosity. Dandelions and stone fruits.

Chestnut-scented would-be-Hermitage. 60% Marsanne, 40%Roussanne. An unfiltered dry white from young vines. New barrels and old, early- and late-harvested grapes, creating the finest Saint Joseph blanc, bar none, since Faury's 2004. The visuals in the glass start things off nicely. Then the bouquet. It smells complex and honeyed, with ample amounts of charm. A nice combination of lushness and dry nervosity. Dandelions and stone fruits.

Chestnut-scented would-be-Hermitage. 60% Marsanne, 40%Roussanne. An unfiltered dry white from young vines. New barrels and old, early- and late-harvested grapes, creating the finest Saint Joseph blanc, bar none, since Faury's 2004. The visuals in the glass start things off nicely. Then the bouquet. It smells complex and honeyed, with ample amounts of charm. A nice combination of lushness and dry nervosity. Dandelions and stone fruits.

